A Special feng Shui Report from Lillian Too ...

Feel Sexier, Happier and More Loving When You Use Feng Shui!

Bad marriage causes husbands to stray, wives to find lovers, your sex life to be less than perfect and communications to be poor... just about everything you could think of and more... going wrong with a marriage. And for singles bad feng shui makes it very hard – in fact, almost impossible – to get married, relationships dissolve for no apparent reason, and it's often hard to find anyone to date!

Can Feng Shui, a thousand year old science really spice up your love life and jazz up your marriage? Better yet, can it help you find the man (or woman) of your dreams?

Indeed, it is not only possible, but also highly probable that when the marriage and romance corners of your home or apartment are properly activated and suitably aligned your chances for romantic happiness will be greatly improved!

And at the same time you must also realize that right now you could be staying in a room where certain aspects of the furniture arrangement or layout may actually be hurting your marriage and romance feng shui... spoiling existing and even potential romantic alignments and creating havoc in your love life!

There are several things you can do to activate your romance feng shui including identifying the romance area of your home according to the 8 Aspirations Pa Kua and using your Kua number to your best advantage.

But you must also be aware of several feng shui taboos and correct them if you want to have a better social life and activate your sheng chi making it easier for you to meet a potential mate.

Activating The Universal Marriage Corner

It is the southwest corner of your home that should be activated to attract good marriage and romance feng shui based on the 8 Life Aspirations formula.

First you must locate the southwest corner by using a compass to identify this location. Take your direction standing in the center of the house – we do it this way since we are dealing with location rather than direction and taking one's directions from the center is deemed to be more accurate.

Now you must be sure there are no toilets, bathrooms, garages, kitchens or storerooms located here. The worst of all is when a toilet is located here since all the marriage opportunities and happiness simply get flushed down the toilet. Families sometimes inadvertently ignore this rule of feng shui, and the sons and daughters of the family have difficulty getting married or staying married! If you discover there is a toilet located in this corner of your home and you are having relationship or other social problems you are advised to stop using this toilet all together... or relocate the toilet elsewhere!

Now you can activate this corner to attract excellent marriage and romance feng shui but if you do have a toilet or kitchen in this area it is first best to relocate such unsuitable rooms. If, for example, you put flowers here to activate and attract romance and the toilet is still there you may attract very unsuitable partners!

You must first open up the marriage/romance corner before activating it and the best way to do this is with natural quartz crystals since this is an earth sector. Place the crystals on a table with a marble or stone top or hang a painting, which shows mountains and nice scenery symbolizing earth. Keep this corner well lit always since according to the 5-element theory fire produces earth. You can use other fire symbols as well like a red lampshade or lantern in the corner, red flowers or glitter lamps all work well.

Your Personal Romance/Marriage Direction or Corner

Now your personal marriage corner or romance direction is based on your Kua number, which is determined by your gender and according to your date of birth. If you do not know your personal kua number then just go to www.wofs.com where you will find the "kua calculator" that has been programmed to deliver your kua number to you instantly once you enter the appropriate information. Do this now if you don't know your kua number.

This personal marriage/romance corner is known in feng shui terms as your Nien Yen corner. Loosely translated "nien yen" means longevity with rich descendants. This is the corner and the direction, which affects everything to do with your love life and family happiness. When this corner is properly oriented and is activated it makes for harmonious family relationships, bringing marriage opportunities to those who are single, brings children to those who are childless and generally improves relationships between husband and wife, and between members of the household.

Check your personal marriage corner, your Nien Yen direction from the table to the right:

USING YOUR LOVE DIRECTION

If you face your love direction when you meet somebody, you are instantly at an advantage. If you go out on a first date with someone you like, chances of it developing into a romance becomes much higher. If you are married and wanting to tap the love direction, it is an extremely good idea to sleep with your head pointed to your love direction. For those of you who are having a hard time conceiving a child, sleeping with the head pointed to the man's love direction (which is also the family direction) is a good way of generating the luck of descendants, of having children, and of being able to conceive.

KUA NO.	NIEN YEN DIRECTION: LOVE
Kua 1	South
Kua 2	Northwest
Kua 3	Southeast
Kua 4	East
Kua 5	For Kua 5, it becomes Kua 2 for Males and Kua 8 for females
Kua 6	Southwest
Kua 7	Northeast
Kua 8	West
Kua 9	North

Again, once you know your nien yen or personal love direction try to make sure that neither the toilet nor the kitchen or storeroom is located here. These just press down on your marriage luck. And make sure you don't place things like brooms and mops in this corner either.

Activating For Love and Romance

There are universally accepted symbols for love that can be placed in the southwest and your personal love direction to attract love into your life.

Mandarin Ducks: Be sure you have a pair or even a whole family and not just one duck! These are the Chinese symbol for marital bliss and are often representative of young love. Get a bejeweled pair of ducks or a finely carved pair of wooden ducks and place them on a table or even on a square sheet of mirror to simulate water.

Love Birds: These are great and may be substituted for Mandarin ducks – or use a picture of lovebirds or birds made of glass or carved versions. It is not advised to keep real birds in cages as this represents lack of freedom and does not bring good luck.

The Double Happiness Sign: This is the symbol of happy occasions – what the Chinese refer to as hei see. Look for a large version of this sign from a Chinese card or calligraphy shop and be sure it's in red. This signifies marriage and should be effective for singles that can't seem to meet the person of their dreams.

Valentines and Cupid: These and other symbols of love and romance are also excellent activators... go ahead and use your imagination. Use heart designs any way you can... in picture frames, a heart shaped jewelry box... things like this.

Roses signify the universal expression of love and are great for the nien yen corner. You don't have to use real roses either... lovely silk ones will do just as well and they never fade. However, if you do use real flowers then be sure to throw them out the minute they begin to fade, as this is a source of shar chi or killing chi, which is very inauspicious. Be sure to remove any thorns from the roses as well. Chinese also like to use peonies to symbolize marriage so if you can find any pictures or screens or porcelain with the peony image this is also good for this corner.

Bedroom Taboos

If things aren't going right between you and your partner and when love seems to have faded suddenly, especially after moving into a new apartment or flat then it's a good idea to check to see whether both of you are being affected by bad feng shui or killing chi. These are what I refer to as "bedroom taboos" and they are fairly easy to rectify.

MIRRORS: Mirrors facing the bed are very harmful to a marriage – whether facing you directly or on the sidewalls; my advice is to get rid of them immediately. Mirrors in the bedroom in feng shui are supposed to cause friction between the couple because of the appearance of a third party... meaning either the husband or the wife could find someone else.

OPEN BOOKSHELVES directly facing the bed create shar chi or killing chi... poison arrows aimed directly at the couple. One or the other will often get migraines or become ill. Open shelves should be closed up with a door, or if that is too expensive put something in front like an artificial creeper plant to deflect the knife-like edges of the shelves. You should also observe this rule in your office and other rooms in your home.

WALLPAPER with sharp, pointed design or stars will create inauspicious chi so it is best to avoid designs like this when choosing your wallpaper.

PAINTINGS in the bedroom should be happy and symbolize auspicious occasions. Sunrise scenes are better than sunsets; flowers are better than animals (do not have pictures of fierce animals) and avoid abstract art that shows distorted views of people and structures. These cause really nasty vibes and will affect the couple's well being.

TELEVISION is discouraged, as are computers and workout and gym equipment. TV screens and computer monitors are mirrors; unless you can close up the television in a large cabinet when you are going to sleep it is better not to have one. As for the computer and gym equipment remember that this is a place of love and rest – not your office or the gym.

There You Have It!

You now know that the universal corner for love and romance in any home is southwest and that you must check the area first for toilets etc., then open it up and activate it with the tools we discussed above. You also have a personal love direction based on your kua number and it is very important to activate this direction as well with the symbols I have described. Finally it's necessary in all cases before doing any activation to check for bedroom taboos like poison arrows resulting from open shelving and taking care of mirrors in the room. There is so much more you can learn about feng shui and your love life but this should give you a good start!
